

Dear Family, Friends, and Colleagues

As impossible as it seems, Roz Rosenfeld died suddenly and completely unexpectedly at home of a stroke on June 2, at the age of 82.

She had been the healthiest 82-year old on the planet, walking up Marin, going to the gym, with most people 20 years her junior unable to keep up with her. In the weeks before she died she had visited both daughters and their families (in Seattle and Boston) and went hiking in Mineral King. She had just returned from a wonderful trip with Art to Lake Tahoe on the afternoon of her death.

She is survived by Art, Anne, Margaret, and six grandchildren, ages 7 to 13.

We will be having a memorial service for Roz in Berkeley in early September. Details will be forthcoming. In the meantime, please send us memories or photos that we can include in a book we're making.

Please don't send flowers, but you could contribute to your favorite charity, or even make a donation in memory of Roz to the Blum Center for Developing Economies (<http://blumcenter.berkeley.edu/donate-blum-center>). In the Special Instructions section, please direct your donation to the Rosenfeld Fund.

Henceforth you can keep in touch with Art with the contact information below.
